

5th International Conference on

Microbial Physiology and Genomics

September 29-30, 2016 London, UK

Marie Joelle Virolle

University Paris Sud, France

The challenge to discover novel antibiotics

More and more pathogenic bacteria are now resisting to most antibiotics in current use imposing a serious threat to human health and longevity. What is the future of antibiotherapy? Where and how could novel antibiotics be found? The future of the various empirical and rational strategies to discover novel antibiotics will be discussed.

Biography

Marie Joelle Virolle is associated with University of Paris-Sud, France. Marie Joelle has published several papers in reputed journals. Marie Joelle is committed to highest standards of excellence and it proves through the authorship of many books. Marie Joelle research interests include Systems Biology, Molecular Biology and Microbiology.

marie-joelle.virolle@i2bc.paris-saclay.fr

Notes: