Medical staff must change, when it comes to Dementia

Biography

Michael Ellenbogen was diagnosed with Young-Onset Alzheimer's Disease at the age of 49. Prior to his diagnosis, he was a network operations manager for a Fortune 500 financial institution. Difficulty with work-related tasks eventually led to his early retirement. As a world-renowned International Dementia Advocate & Connector, he has been featured in nationally syndicated TV, radio and other media outlets. He has written for blogs, newspapers, journals and websites and shared his personal perspective as a guest speaker. Michael served on the Pennsylvania Alzheimer's Disease Planning Committee and other advisory councils. He was a regular speaker at the Advisory Council on Alzheimer's Research, Care and Services and has been featured in the Alzheimer's disease International's 2012 World Alzheimer's Report. He represented the U.S./World for people living with dementia at the World Health Organization. He is interested in motivating those with Alzheimer's to raise their voices and reduce the stigma surrounding the disease. He believes that his diagnosis with Alzheimer's disease is not the end for him, because he has so much more to give to the world. Michael wrote about his journey with the disease in his latest book entitled "From the Corner Office to Alzheimer's."
