From simple to complex in oral rehabilitation

Erika Lander

It is not always simple if it seems simple". In the absence, loss or tooth fractures, it gets open in our time an "endless" possibility of treatments using different options and restorative materials. We can evaluate "the simple", and "the complex", i.e. from simple to complex in oral rehabilitation not based on the material used, but in the restorative value of each individual case. Which is important is a successful end. It is a resume of the different treatments (going from the simpler to the more complex alternative) to restore and rehabilitate the patients. From veneers and endocrowns to full mouth implants.
