

3rd Euro Congress and Expo on

Dental & Oral Health

June 16-18, 2015 Alicante, Spain

The effect of anti- resorptive therapies in the oral cavity

Mary Luz Arbelaez
FSFB University Hospital, USA

The prescription of anti-resorptive: Biphosphonate, anti-angiogenic medications has been increasing globally during the last years as they are being used to treat osteoporosis, breast cancer Pagets disease, multiple myeloma, malign hypercalcaemia, and osteogenesis imperfect amongst others, Having a direct impact on the general osseous metabolism and affecting mainly the alveolar bone turnover it presents

The object of the present revision is to call the dentists attention and its various specializations regarding odontological comorbidities which affect the quality of life

Biography

She is Dentist Orthodontist in National University Of Colombia, Head of Orthodontic department University Hospital FSFB, Observership Jackson Memorial Hospital, University of Miami Clinical Interest: Apnea, tisular regeneration, management clinical difficult Cases.

arbelaezmaryluz@yahoo.es

Notes: