Suicide prevention: pre and post approach for those affected by suicide

Diana Altavilla

Argentine Catholic University, Argentina

Comprehensive treatment in suicide prevention required precise devices after suicide crisis or completed suicides. The high disrupted impact on people close to them implies working preventively with family members but also with friends, colleagues and professional in-charge of the patient. My research and clinical work with those affected of suicide created a clinical system for metabolizing the pathological alterations, reduced the impact and strengthen the psychic apparatus in the social environment. Based in three axes, this system is easy for transmit and has given to the moment an excellent result in the teams that apply it.
