

Post Traumatic Stress Syndrome and Gaza

Dear Editor

A minority, about 10%, of voting citizens opposed leaving Gaza. There was a conflict between "State" and "Church". "State" voters wished to comply with National and International policy, while "Church" voters were advised that this could be a "Decree from Above".

Is it possible that today, unresolved issues about this debate contribute to "Post Traumatic Stress"? If so, more public awareness and debate could contribute to greater understanding of this event.
